Hi Peder1981,

I found peder1981/AdvPP while looking through GitHub projects that have already attracted stargazer attention.

If you are planning a release, launch post, directory push, or enterprise-facing update, NiubiStar can help package the project into a broader developer outreach campaign.

For early repos, the goal is usually to create credible discovery paths beyond the repository page itself.

The package I would recommend is Enterprise Outreach. It is built for teams that want more than a simple GitHub signal boost: targeted developer discovery, launch proof, relevant community placement, and hands-on execution around a specific growth window.

You can review it here:

No GitHub token is required. A public repository link and a target timeline are enough to scope the campaign.

If this is relevant, reply with your launch window and the audience you want to reach. I can suggest a practical outreach plan before you place anything.

Best,

NiubiStar Support Team
